As part of the Services, we may collect information about your HVAC system. This includes information such as temperature, thermostat settings, thermostat schedule(s), how you control the HVAC system, and the operation of your HVAC system. Some of the data we collect is relatively static, such as data about the heating and/or cooling system (for example, serial numbers and device IDs for devices in the HVAC system and the Sensi model and serial number). Other data we collect is more dynamic, such as information about current and past device usage levels or information about abnormal device functioning. We collect this data directly from you and the HVAC system and transmit it through your network and/or Internet services. Our information collection may continue until you disconnect the Products and the Services are able to be cancelled or terminated. We augment the data with public data from third parties, such as local weather conditions. Note that if you do not allow us to collect this information, we may not be able to provide the full capabilities of Products and Services.
